The conference is themed “In the Flow: People, Media, Materialities”, and invites cultural and social researchers from all disciplines to examine the interacting flows of people, materialities, ideas and media technologies. In our high-tech world, where social and cultural changes are becoming increasingly global, new power structures, social identities and exclusion occur. These phenomena are changing, and all in the constant presence of digital media encroaching on people’s everyday lives, which in turn are transforming the media.

The conference includes a broad range of parallel sessions exploring the flows of people, media and/or materialities in everyday life, within cultural fields, and society at large. The themes explored range from body monitoring to translation, touching on issues such as heritage, search practices and remembering. Several sessions focus on tracking and measuring of flows in personal as well as social and commercial contexts. Abstracts of all parallel sessions can be found on the conference home page.

Participants are invited to submit abstracts of individual papers for any of the parallel sessions listed on the conference web page, or for an open session without a given theme. Papers may relate to any of the following or other areas:

- critique/critical opportunities
- environment and climate
- literature and language
- visual culture
- institutions
- geographies
- history
- cultural heritage, use of history, and memory
- translocal, diasporic and postcolonial processes
- everyday life
- copyright
- social mobilisation
- sociology of culture
- cultural economics
Practical informations:

Paper abstracts are welcome until 8 February 2015. Abstracts should be of no more than 150 words, and are submitted via the conference home page.

The conference is held in Norrköping, Sweden, and has two working languages: plenaries and most parallel group sessions will be held in English, but some group sessions are held in Swedish. More information on the conference, full program, page for abstract submission and a list of all parallel sessions can be found on our home page: www.acsis.liu.se
